The Movements of the Enemy.

The movements of the rebels near Washington indicate one of two things—they expect by their hasty withdrawal from the lines heretofore occupied by them to induce our army to follow them into an ambuscade, or else they have been secretly moving their troops from Virginia to Kentucky and Missouri. The large forces of the enemy which have unaccountably appeared in the two latter states, within a short time, gives color to the latter hypothesis. The campaign in the west is assuming new interest on this account; and there are those who fear that Louisville and Cincinnati are not altogether safe.

Interesting from the South.

A gentleman has just arrived in this city, from the south, from whom we have obtained some interesting information, and who, although well known here, for obvious reasons, does not desire to have his name appear in this connection.

Our informant left Mobile on the 17th ult., and came by railroad through Nashville, by means of passes obtained from the city authorities. At Mobile business was almost entirely suspended. Goods, such as cloths, flannels, blankets, shoes and prints, had risen very much in price. Cloths and flannels had advanced two or three hundred per cent. Blankets were worth a dollar per pound; shoes are very scarce, and a sufficient number cannot be obtained for the soldiers. Leather has advanced very much and is hard to be obtained. Bacon in Nashville is worth 25 cents per pound. Coffee brings 40 cents per pound at Mobile. Salt has become very dear, being worth five or six times the usual price.

As yet there is no suffering among the people of Alabama for the most of the necessities of life. When the rebellion first broke out, insurrections among the negroes were apprehended, but all alarm in that respect has subsided.

There is no cotton at Mobile, the cotton factors having requested their friends not to send forward a bale until the ports are opened. It is not considered safe on the sea board. There is about a quarter of a crop of cotton this year, it having been very much injured by the rains, which have been continued, almost the whole season.

The blockade is quite effectual at Mobile. No vessel has run the blockade at that point this summer. United States vessels are continually seen off the mouth of the bay. The fleet varies from one to five vessels.

No preparations had been commenced for defense at Mobile, previous to the affair at Hatteras, but that alarmed the people very much, and they are now vigorously at work fortifying the city. They have one fort at the entrance of the bay, thirty miles distant, which is manned and occupied, and another, Fort Gaines, opposite, in an unfinished state. There are only two regiments at Mobile, but they were expecting more from the country.

Before our informant left Mobile he heard of the burning of the pirate Judith in Pensacola harbor. Three barges, with fifty men in each, left the frigate Colorado, and proceeded silently and without attracting attention, right under the tremendous batteries of the enemy to the ship, boarded her and set her on fire, having a hand to hand contest with the crew. Our forces then withdrew to their barges, and as they left gave a parting salute to Pensacola, firing into the town, killing a number of soldiers, and riddling some of the houses. The people of Mobile considered it an audacious and brilliant affair.

The people of the south thought at first that the United States government would not be able to put a strong army into the field, nor have the ability to raise money for the war; but they have now made up their minds that the north is able to do both; and also that the blockade will not be interfered with by foreign nations. They expect a long war, but that the north will, at last, become exhausted, and give up the contest. They are quite determined never to yield.

Along the railroad through Mississippi, there were a few troops encamped, and all were intending to go north, to Kentucky.

Nashville seems to be the grand center for speculators and traders, in consequence of the large amount of goods smuggled from the north through Kentucky. Prices there were higher than at Mobile, the closing of the Nashville and Louisville railroad having put an embargo upon further supplies. The military forces which had been encamped in Tennessee appear to have been moved forward into Kentucky. The general talk was about the campaign in the latter state.

Our informant left the railroad at the state line of Kentucky, and came by stage across the country to Henderson, on the Ohio river, to avoid the military troubles along the line of the railroad. The sentiment of the people of Kentucky, so far as could be judged by conversation, was favorable to the south. The only place where a different state of things existed was at Hopkinsville, near the state line, where there was a Lincoln camp of about four hundred soldiers.

The impression upon the mind of the gentleman who gives us this information, after becoming acquainted with the state of things in both sections, is, that there must be a long and bloody war before the contest is ended. Well, we say, better that it should be so, than that the Union should be destroyed and the country reduced to a half dozen small confederacies, with no power on the earth, becoming an easy prey to the monarchies of the old world. If we become divided we must fall as a nation.

Editorial Correspondence.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27, 1861.

A week's sojourn in this modern Babylon brings me round to a writing point, and if I am discursive and rambling, attribute it to the confusion of ideas likely to result from the variety of sights and sounds to which the eye and the ear are yet scarcely familiarized.

Since my arrival here I have had the gratification of meeting no inconsiderable number of Janesville people. Among the present residents of our town, are O. K. Bennett, Wm. Tallman and his wife, C. W. Seaver, W. G. Wheelock, Col. Miller, Hiram Jackman, P. A. Lee, (firm of Webb & Lee) and while writing Wm. H. Parker and S. C. Cushman have dropped in; Cushman bound to Fort Trumbull, and Parker on his way to Washington. Parker is in charge of a company of marines from Boston ordered to report at headquarters. Morris Smith and one of the McKays have been in the city, but I did not see them.

Several former residents of Janesville are now in business here, as principals or employees. Two of the Bathgate boys, Wm. and James, have good situations; William is in one of the largest jewelry importing establishments in the city; James (formerly in the Badger State Bank) is in the Park Bank. O. L. Hartwick, a clerk with H. O. Clark & Co., is a lawyer in Wall street, doing well for himself, if not for his clients. A. W. Potter, formerly with A. W. Wheelock, is one of the owners and manufacturers of Farr's American Camp Chest, which is a novelty in its way, comprising a full "kit" of camp utensils for a mess of four persons, and the chest itself capable of being transformed into a table of a size sufficient to seat the mess about it.

The day was consumed in military warfare, which resulted in no particular advantage on either side. The rebels had a large force, and the administration of all who witnessed them, but the brilliant charges of the previous day were not repeated. The cavalry experts of the day were reserved for the defense of the camp, the engineers, which covered the retreat, having nothing to do.

This morning a general alarm was sounded, and the rebels were driven from the fort, and the gunners were called to their posts.

The Eighth Regiment.

We learn from Capt. Britton, of the Janesville Fire Zouaves, that the eighth regiment, to which his company is attached, will leave Camp Randall for Missouri, on Saturday next.

Our people have heretofore liberally responded to the call for furnishing the regiments which have passed through here, with refreshments. We hope they will do so on this occasion. We have the extra inducement now that our own friends and neighbors are a part of this regiment, on their way to defend their country from the assaults of traitors. Let us, therefore, give the boys proof that they have a warm place in our hearts. The method of performing this service was well carried out when Capt. Wheeler's company passed through here on their way to Washington. Instead of a dinner at a public table, our people put up in boxes, baskets and packages, whatever they thought would be acceptable to the soldiers, and in this way, what was at first designed as a little testimony of regard to our Janesville Light Guard, was increased in amount, so that the whole regiment was regaled with substantial food and delicacies to which our soldiers are not used in camp. That this was received with great satisfaction we know from the fact that it was frequently the subject of comment in letters afterward published. We propose that the ladies of Janesville repeat this kind of testimonial to the eighth regiment.

We understand that this regiment is armed with the old Harper's Ferry musket. We trust the governor will, if it is possible, give them a proportion of better arms.

PRESENTATION.—The members of the Baptist Sunday School, and especially of his class, presented Mr. Ira Dutton, the librarian, who is about to leave for the war with the Zouave Cadets, a valuable rubber overcoat. The pastor, in making the presentation, expressed the universal feeling, that if he should prove as faithful in the army as he had been in the school, all would be proud of him. The speaker said the school would follow him with their sympathies and prayers, and that he was going forth to fight for the children, and for those who could not go; that he was offering himself on the altar of a noble cause; and that with the love of God in his heart, he would be shielded from immoral influences, and be prepared for danger and death.

There were many moistened cheeks in that assembly, and earnest prayer ascended in behalf of the young volunteer. It is most evident that the vital purity and moral worth of the community are all with the government and against the rebellion. *

A WORKING PASTOR.—The following statistics of the labors of Rev. E. J. Goodspeed, of the Baptist church, during the third year of his pastoral duty in this city, will show that he has not been idle. We commend the statement to the public as an example of untiring industry, and as an evidence that the position of our clergy generally, when they perform their duties faithfully, are no sinecures. Mr. Goodspeed has, during his pastoral year, preached 120 sermons, delivered 18 lectures, attended 136 meetings for prayer, business and social purposes at home, and some 50 gatherings in other places, married 22 couples, buried 15 persons, and made upwards of 900 calls and visits.

ROBBERY AND PROBABLE MURDER.—Matthew Carroll, an Irishman, was found this afternoon, in some bushes near John Keefe's, on land owned by Edward Barker, four miles north of this city, having been stabbed in the abdomen and right arm. He says he was attacked just before noon to-day by three men, he supposes for the purpose of robbing him of his money.

From his weak condition it is impossible to learn much from him, and it is not known whether the robbers succeeded in getting his money. His wounds were dressed by Drs. Tread and Jones, and are considered very dangerous, if not fatal.

INFANTRY, CAVALRY AND ARTILLERY.—A camp of instruction has just been commenced at Chicago, on the old United States fair grounds, under the command of experienced officers. This camp is lighted with gas and furnished with all other conveniences for a well ordered camp. Six regiments are to go into this camp at once, including one of cavalry. Capt. A. L. Halle of the Anderson Rifles, is here for a few picked men for one of these regiments. He may be found on West Milwaukee street, a few doors east of the Hyatt House.

From the Eighth Regiment.

HEADQUARTERS JANESVILLE FIRE ZOUAVES, CAMP RANDALL, Sept. 30th, 1861.]

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Col. Murphy told me this morning that he should be ready to leave Wisconsin on Saturday, and that he had been ordered to Missouri. The most of the men are pleased to think they are soon to leave and go to Missouri; we have a good set of field officers, and every man in the regiment would die for them. The most of the company officers are a Young America set of fellows, and every day set of men, so I think we're the first Wisconsin regiment ordered to the west, you can look for good work from the Eighth.

I do not think I shall be down to Janesville again until we leave. We have a review here this afternoon, and expect to be paid off to-morrow. I receive papers from you daily, for which I am much obliged.

W. B. BRITTON,

Capt. Co. G, 8th Reg't Wis. Vol.

P. S.—My wife is here in camp, and says she is going with me to Missouri to look after the men of my company. W. B. B.

MILITARY TERMS.—Captain T. O. Bigney, of Oxfordville Volunteers, is designated to command at Camp Treadway in this city, until relieved by superior officer.

There are to be seven batteries and 1050 men in the artillery regiment of this state, which will be ordered to Camp Utley, at Racine.

The first tenth and eleventh regiments have been supplied with muskets and rifles. Each regiment will have 600 muskets and 450 Minie rifles.

A. F. St. Sure Lindsfelt, M. D., of Sheboygan, is commissioned as 2d assistant surgeon, of the 12th regiment.

The soldiers at Camp Randall have refused to cook their rations, and an arrangement was made for Commissary General Wadsworth to receive the rations and have them cooked.

NOTICE.—Those persons who subscribed to the enlistment fund in the Town of Bradford, in the hands of Walter M. Scott, will please pay the same at the drug store of Tallman & Collins, Janesville.

SPECULATIONS IN SUGAR.—Under the new tariff some splendid speculations in sugar have been made. Two months ago a firm in Boston, the Bulletin says, sold one thousand sacks of sugar for four and three-eighths cents, and the same sugar to-day is selling at seven and a half cents, making a difference of over $30,000. Another firm bought an invoice of 12,500 bags Manilla sugar in bond, which cost, duly paid, say five cents and a quarter. This has just been sold at seven cents and a quarter, making a difference of some $30,000.

The Movements of the Enemy.

The movements of the rebels near Washington indicate one of two things—they expect by their hasty withdrawal from the lines heretofore occupied by them to induce our army to follow them into an ambuscade, or else they have been secretly moving their troops from Virginia to Kentucky and Missouri. The large forces of the enemy which have unaccountably appeared in the two latter states, within a short time, gives color to the latter hypothesis. The campaign in the west is assuming new interest on this account; and there are those who fear that Louisville and Cincinnati are not altogether safe.

Interesting from the South.

A gentleman has just arrived in this city, from the south, from whom we have obtained some interesting information, and who, although well known here, for obvious reasons, does not desire to have his name appear in this connection.

Our informant left Mobile on the 17th ult., and came by railroad through Nashville, by means of passes obtained from the city authorities. At Mobile business was almost entirely suspended. Goods, such as cloths, flannels, blankets, shoes and prints, had risen very much in price. Cloths and flannels had advanced two or three hundred per cent. Blankets were worth a dollar per pound; shoes are very scarce, and a sufficient number cannot be obtained for the soldiers. Leather has advanced very much and is hard to be obtained. Bacon in Nashville is worth 25 cents per pound. Coffee brings 40 cents per pound at Mobile. Salt has become very dear, being worth five or six times the usual price.

As yet there is no suffering among the people of Alabama for the most of the necessities of life. When the rebellion first broke out, insurrections among the negroes were apprehended, but all alarm in that respect has subsided.

There is no cotton at Mobile, the cotton factors having requested their friends not to send forward a bale until the ports are opened. It is not considered safe on the sea board. There is about a quarter of a crop of cotton this year, it having been very much injured by the rains, which have been continued, almost the whole season.

The blockade is quite effective at Mobile. No vessel has run the blockade at that point this summer. United States vessels are continually seen off the mouth of the bay. The best varies from one to five vessels.

No preparations had been commenced for defense at Mobile, previous to the affair at Hatteras, but that alarmed the people very much, and they are now vigorously at work fortifying the city. They have one fort at the entrance of the bay, thirty miles distant, which is manned and occupied, and another, Fort Gaines, opposite, in an unfinished state. There are only two regiments at Mobile, but they were expecting more from the country.

Before our informant left Mobile he heard of the burning of the pirate Judith in Pensacola harbor. Three barges, with fifty men in each, left the frigate Colorado, and proceeded silently and without attracting attention, right under the tremendous batteries of the enemy to the ship, boarded her and set her on fire, having a hand to hand contest with the crew. Our forces then withdrew to their barges, and as they left gave a parting salute to Pensacola, firing into the town, killing a number of soldiers, and riddling some of the houses. The people of Mobile considered it an audacious and brilliant affair.

The people of the south thought at first that the United States government would not be able to put a strong army into the field, nor have the ability to raise money for the war; but they have now made up their minds that the north is able to do both; and also that the blockade will not be interfered with by foreign nations. They expect a long war, but that the north will, at last, become exhausted, and give up the contest. They are quite determined never to yield.

Along the railroad through Mississippi, there were a few troops encamped, and all were intending to go north, to Kentucky.

My list of Janesville men would be incomplete without a reference to one so widely and so well known as Charlie Windt.

Charlie, as all are aware, is connected as the western contracting agent with the "Merchant's Despatch," a freighting department of the American Express Company. The principal office of the "Despatch" is 14 Murray street, and seems to be a resort of western men generally, and Wisconsin men particularly. At this office I have met most of the Janesville residents I have mentioned, and learned the location of the others who are now living here. The "force" of the office consists of A. H. Livingstone, (general agent,) a descendant of Chancellor Livingstone; O. Packard, E. P. Montague, J. W. Jackson, and the veritable Windt. In company with Mr. W. I. have visited and explored the principal depot and offices of the American Express Company, on Hudson, Jay and Staple streets. This building is one of the notable fixtures of the city, and ranks among the first of the business places of New York. Here I was made acquainted with Holland, the general manager, DeWitt C. Rice, the treasurer, Joseph Myers, who has charge of a branch office in Broadway, C. G. Clark, in charge of the money department, (who probably handles enough cash to run the Gazette office quite comfortably,) A. H. Pride, G. R. Story, John Hadley, and others entrusted with special departments of this great company. After witnessing the cordial manner in which all pleasure or business visitors are greeted, both in the "Despatch" and "Express" offices, I do not wonder at the personal popularity of the officers of both, or, in view of the established business character of the company they represent, the immense amount of valuable freight entrusted to it.

THE SEIGE AND SURRENDER OF LEXINGTON.

Full and Circumstantial Accounts of the Event.

THE REBELS IN LEXINGTON.

At this juncture our men discovered, with no little dismay, an engine of war which was being brought to bear upon them, threatening the very consequences which they dreaded most—a sure approach to destruction. The rebels presented a strong breastwork of hemp, which appeared like a moving barrier, impenetrable to bullets or common shot, and even to grape-shot, which were fired from the opposite hill,蔡哥 was over their colors were still cherished, and with fond devotion preserved amidst the smoke, were borne away in every direction of the rebels, who were flushed with the ardor of victory, and the rebels lost no time in marching it.

The men lost no time after the capitulation in demanding the specie that had been taken from the banks. This was about $300,000. The whole of it was buried under the tent of one of the officers, and was not recovered until after the close of the campaign, but the amount was recouped. Their lives were placed in jeopardy by persisting in the course indicated, whereas they were otherwise led to expect the kindest treatment. They accordingly revealed the secret of their capture, and the rebels lost no time in marching it.
